Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 1-4 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Froehlich (US 4,983,083). Froehlich discloses a fixing device comprising an anchoring bolt (4) having a fixing means (5) and a widening anchoring zone (8); a covering (9) made of silicone-containing plastic ("polysiloxan" column 3, line 11), smaller than the widening anchoring zone and; a curable composition (3). Since the claims are claims are directed to "[a] fixing device" the correspondence with an undercut portion of a drilled hole is an intended use of which Froehlich would be capable and the covering material would provide at least some flexibility.

Response to Remarks

Applicant's remarks have been considered but, the claims continue to be anticipated over Froehlich.

Applicant argues that in Froehlich, the hole is not an undercut drill hole. In response and as noted in the above rejection, since the claims are directed to a fixing device the combination with the drilled hole is only an intended use and, a recitation of the intended use of the claimed invention must result in a structural difference between the claimed invention and the prior art in order to patentably distinguish the claimed invention from the prior art. If the prior art structure is capable of performing the intended use, then it meets the claim. In the instant case, the fixing element of Froehlich would be capable of use within an undercut drill hole.

Applicant argues that the polysiloxan disclosed in Froehlich is for preventing adhesion and not a resilient plastic for increased flexibility as claimed. In response, the examiner disagrees because while the intent of the polysiloxan in Froehlich is for preventing adhesion, the nature of the material being a silicone based plastic material would make it at least somewhat resilient and allow for at least some increase in flexibility.

Conclusion

THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
